Well I got a SSR Rowdy (150cc gy6 big ruckus clone) in non-running condition. Had no spark, troubleshot electrics, replaced stator, now has spark. Picked it up from the shop and they told me it has a hard time starting when cold and they were having to shoot it with carb cleaner to get it to start.

150cc GY6 still having starting issues.... : scooters

The GY6 engine is noted for not having stable clearances. Many of them go through a period of months - adjust the valves, run it a few minutes, hours, sometimes even days, and then off again. I have had to adjust valves on the same engine every 2 or 3 miles at times. And I am one to double check the clearances after I adjust them etc.

It's usually not too hard. My scooter usually starts OK on the 2nd or 3rd kick. If the scooter does turn over but still doesn't start you have to check for a spark and make sure gas is getting to the engine. To check for a spark, remove the spark plug from the cylinder, hold the tip of the plug against the cylinder head and crank the engine.
